On every side last night were heard words of congratulations and praise for the very splendid success made by the ladies who have had charge of the ball. For weeks they have worked diligently for the cause, and the complete success of the undertaking was the cause of the greatest satisfaction to them. Although they worked from early yesterday morning until 6 o'clock last evening making ready for the ball, scarce a member of the committee was absent from the ball and not one of the great throng present enjayed the event more than they. The first big charity ball given in years was planned and carried to complete success by these women, and if they were tired they forgot it in the joy of the success which crowned their efforts.

His Lordship engaged a score of cricketers, all expert throwers and catchers, had the missive inclosed in a ball, and arranging his men at intervals in a circle, got them to throw the ball as swiftly as possible from one to another. Mr. Balfour Discusses Foreign Relations at Lord Mayor's Banquet.

REVERSES PROPHECY OF PITT, A CENTURY OLD

Mr. Reid Vies With Premier in Pleasant Words for Nation's Credit.

LONDON, Nov. 9 .- "A century ago Pitt standing where I now stand, prophesied war. Today I prophesy peace." This was the text on which Premier Balfour based his speech concerning the relations of Great Britain with foreign countries at the Lord Mayor's banquet in the Guild hall tonight. Mr. Balfour and Whitelaw Reid, the American Emand Whitelaw Reid the American Em-bassador, who replied to the toast of "Their Excellencies, the Foreign Minis-ters," proposed by the Lord Mayor, vied with each other in pleasant words for the credit of their respective countries as leaders among the advocates of ar-bitration. The whole tener of the speeches was optimistic. The Fremler's reference to Russia was particularly happy. He said:

Refers to Russia.

Refers to Russia.

"Our friends in Russia are absorbing public interest by the great movement they are making in the direction, as we believe, of self-government. The task of the Emperor and his advisers is indeed not a light one, and those who for centuries have practiced parliamentary government know best the difficulties which confront them. There is not a citizen in Great Britain who does not wish them every success, and I express the enriest wish that the movement may not in the future be strained by the unnecessary effusion of blood. We hope that the movement will bring happiness to countless millions, unsulled by a repetition of the painful and horrible events which made the initial progress so lamentable."

With Quaint Ceremonial.

With Quaint Ceremonial. The banquet was conducted with all the quaint ceremonial peculiar to the occasion. The guests of Lord Mayor Morgan included the retiring Lord Mayor, Sir John Pound, and Premier Balfour as guests of honor: Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Mr. Arnold-Forsier, Secretary of War; William St. John Brodrick, Secretary for India; Lord Cawdor, Baron Ashbourne, Lord Chancellor of Ireland; Embassador Reid, the Japanese, Chinese, Greek, Belgian, Mexican and Slamese, ministers, and about 100 other prominent persons.

Received by Lord Mayor. The banquet was conducted with all Received by Lord Mayor. Received by Lord Mayor.

Prior to the banquet the guests were received by the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress in the great reception room of the Guid hall.

In preposing the toast of "The Imperial Forces," Sheriff Smallman pleasantly referred to the reception in the United States of the British squadron under command of Prince Louis of Battenberg, Mr. Balfour devoted a considerable portion of his speech to the question of the unemployed, expressing sympathy and his desire to every way possible help those out of work, and appealing to private purses for assistance during the stress.

stress. Tries to Ward Off War.

Passing to the foreign policy of the Government, the Premier spoke first of Russia and then said that his Majesty's Government had done everything possible for many years to ward off the dangers of war and had done its best to develop a scheme of arbitration. He alluded to the difficulties attending boundary questions and said he hoped that these all might be settled by arbitration.

Speaks for Arbitration.

Reid Throws Bouquets.

Referring to the Fremier's expressions concerning the probabilities of peace, Mr. Reid said it was the business of diplomatism to make peace and not war and for his part he preferred the court of albitration to the arbitrament of the sword. The Embassador said he would neither concede nor dispute Mr. Balfour's claim that Great Britain had taken precedence in the matter of arbitration, but he would say Great Britain and the United States had set an example and had settled some of the most burning questions through arbitration, and that today the two countries were more cordial in their relations than they had been at any time in the last hundred years.

No Danger of Trouble. Reid Throws Bouquets.

No Danger of Trouble. No Danger of Trouble.

"If you hear of the possibility of differences over fisheries or something eise do not believe it." said the Embassador. "because auch report will be the result of absolute misinformation. There is no question today between the United States and Great Britain that Secretary Root and Secretary Lanadowne cannot speedly settle, and while King Edward and President Roosevelt retain their places there is sure to be a continuance of good relations."

Praises President and King.

Mr. Reid closed with a tribute to the action of President Roosevolt in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan, and said that King Edward was known throughout the United States as an earnest advocate of peace whose tact and moderation had endeared him to every citizen of the republic.

Other speakers were Mr. Arnoid-Forster, Lord Cawdor and Sir Robert Finlay, the Attorney-General.
